The P2P Challenge

1

Students form into a student-led social media agency, perform primary research on the target audience, then using a $2,000 USD operational budget design, pilot, implement, and measure the success of a social or digital initiative, product or tool that:

- ▶ Motivates or empowers students to become involved in countering violent extremism.
- ▶ Catalyzes other students to create their own initiatives, products, or tools to counter violent extremism.
- ▶ Builds a community of interest/network focused on living shared values that also counter violent extremism.

P2P Program Overview

* Universities challenged to counter the pervasiveness of extremism on social media in ways that are credible and authentic to their peers and communities

Most students earn academic credit in marketing, communications, social and digital media, international relations, political science, conflict, human rights, special topics and other related coursework

No limits on creativity or scope, but students implement their projects and demonstrate effect

Sponsored by U.S. Department of State with support from other inter-governmental agencies and Facebook

Teams compete for the chance to present their campaigns in Washington, D.C. to senior government officials, Facebook leadership and earn scholarship awards
